A Family Glitch

DOUGLAS HOLTZ-EAKIN | APRIL 6, 2022

Former President Barack Obama returned to the White House yesterday for a family reunion of sorts. Surrounded by his former vice-president and a roomful of ardent advocates for the Affordable Care Act (ACA), he basked in their praise of the ACA accomplishment. He touted the ACA's expansion of coverage, emphasized its importance as a symbol of the road to universal coverage, and then teed up another key moment in the family's collective efforts: President Biden's announcement of a fix for the family glitch.
