It’s The AAF Exchange — your source for clear, data-driven insight into today’s economic and domestic policy issues.

In our latest episode, AAF President Douglas Holtz-Eakin discusses the Biden Administration’s latest proposed spending plans — the American Jobs Plan and the American Families Plan — and how to pay for them. He explains the potential impact of the administration’s proposal to raise the capital gains tax and whether it is the optimal way to fund this government spending. Holtz-Eakin also discusses why Congress should revive dynamic scoring to assess the administration’s spending plans, and he provides his thoughts on tomorrow’s jobs numbers.

AAF products mentioned in today’s episode:

- Holtz-Eakin and AAF’s Director of Fiscal Policy Gordon Gray explain why the American Jobs Plan isn’t likely to boost the economy, even under favorable conditions.
- In the Daily Dish, Holtz-Eakin explains the options for taxing capital gains and the impact of these options. Subscribe to the Daily Dish here.
- In the Daily Dish, Holtz-Eakin argues that knowing the number of people who initially pay a capital gains tax explains exactly nothing about who really pays for the tax.
- In the Daily Dish, Holtz-Eakin considers why Congress should use dynamic scoring to assess the administration’s spending plans. Read the full analysis on dynamic scoring here, written by Gray.

Whether you’re working from home or taking a walk, The AAF Exchange will keep you up to speed on today’s most pressing policy issues.

Subscribe on iTunes or Soundcloud, or listen here.