$30 Billion in Regulatory Costs

SAM BATKINS | MARCH 13, 2015

Regulators pushed passed $30 billion for the year by adding more than $12.2 billion in costs this week. Annualized costs were $750 million, compared to $1.5 billion in benefits, and more than 7,100 paperwork burden hours. The Department of Energy's (DOE) proposal on new efficiency standards for furnaces led the week.

AAF has catalogued regulations according to their codification in the Code of Federal Regulations (CFR). The CFR is organized into 50 titles, with each title corresponding to an industry or part of government. This snapshot will help to determine which sectors of the economy receive the highest number of regulatory actions.

DOE published one of the largest regulations of the year, a standard for new furnaces that would impose total costs north of $12 billion. AAF reviewed the proposed rule here and found consumers can expect price hikes between 11 and 20 percent because of the regulation. DOE also admitted that small businesses would face conversion costs of 18 percent of total revenue, compared to just three percent for large businesses. As a result, DOE concedes that small entities “may reevaluate the cost-benefit of staying in the MHGF [mobile home gas furnaces] market.” In other words, for small businesses, it might be easier to shut down than comply with the new rule.

AFFORDABLE CARE ACT

Since passage, based on total lifetime costs of the regulations, the Affordable Care Act has imposed costs of \$43.8 billion in state and private-sector burdens and 163.5 million annual paperwork hours.

DODD-FRANK
