Energy

MARK MADDUX | FEBRUARY 22, 2010

Energy is a critical issue for the United States. America uses 23 percent of the world's energy. Oil lies at the center of energy issues – it has been called the lifeblood of our economy. But oil is more than an economic issue. In today's world it is a major strategic vulnerability, a serious threat to our security, our economy and potentially the well being of our planet.
