Highlights of the Fall Regulatory Agenda

PAULINA ENCK | DECEMBER 13, 2021

The Biden Administration released its second Unified Agenda of Regulatory and Deregulatory Actions (UA) on December 10. A new analysis by Director of Regulatory Policy Dan Bosch features a by-the-numbers look at the new UA, and highlights several new regulatory actions not previously included.

Key points:

- The Biden Administration recently unveiled its second regulatory agenda, which provides a list of regulatory actions that the administration plans to work on over the next year.
- Much like the Biden Administration's first agenda from June, the fall version continues the trend of reversing many notable Trump Administration rules.
- Notable issue areas with newly listed rules include the environment, labor, and immigration.
