ICYMI: Restoring Faith in Global Trade

PATRICK HEFFLINGER | DECEMBER 18, 2017

Today in the Huffington Post, AAF President Douglas Holtz-Eakin writes on the the importance of real and visible trade enforcement. Please see an excerpt below.

“Clearly, any potential import restrictions should be weighed against the risk of legal challenges and potential impact on U.S. consumers. But we have reached a crucial juncture for the future of U.S. trade agreements and the strategic and economic benefits that flow from them. It is important to fight the forces of pure protectionism, but not at the expense of fairly enforcing those agreements that are already in place.”
