Quiet Week Marks End of Phase One of Trump's Regulatory Order

DAN GOLDBECK | OCTOBER 2, 2017

The end of the fiscal year, and with it the first phase of President Trump's "one-in, two-out" program, likely overshadow yet another relatively minimal week in new regulations. Agencies published a mere $28.5 million in regulatory costs. New paperwork burdens increased by nearly 180,000 hours. The per capita regulatory burden for 2017 is $451.

TRACKING REGULATORY MODERNIZATION

The most notable item of this past week was how it marked the end of the first phase of Executive Order \(EO\) 13,771. The order directed agencies to achieve $0 or less in net annual regulatory costs between Inauguration Day and the end of Fiscal Year 2017 (January 20 – September 30). The American Action Forum has produced a comprehensive accounting of the various executive agencies' work under this executive order. Through actions under the order's scope, the administration can claim roughly $560 million in savings. The bulk of these savings come from regulatory rescissions from Congressional Review Act resolutions and general inactivity from many agencies. Our report contains further details regarding the EO's implementation as the administration now moves to its next phase.
